WILL-WORK BIG MINE IN LIFE SAVING TESTS

Federal Bureau Undertakes Experiments on a Large Scale in Operation of Key-stone Diggings.

FOR LESSONS IN RESCUING.

Special Attention to Blasting Methods and Ventilation Following Accidents.

Pittsburg, Dec. 16.—With a big coal mine, operated by experienced miners and other employees, the United States bureau of mines is about to start experimental work on the largest scale ever attempted in any country. The Pittsburg Coal Company has turned over to the bureau an important mine at Bruceton, Pa., and the work will begin next week.

Experts in the employ of the bureau will experiment in the production of mine explosions and give lessons on rescue work under actual conditions.

Special Attention to Rescuers

They will show the proportion of pure air needed for each employee; explain ventilation in its every phase, but particularly as it applies to work following an accident; test mining machinery and give great care to the elimination of dust as a possible cause of explosion.

The mine will be opened next week, and skilled miners will be employed as if they were working for a private company. Then the experts will take charge and many unusual things will happen in the mine before the experiments are complete. They are expected to result in great benefit for miners and the industry in general.

LIVERY STABLE CATCHES FIRE

One Horse Badly Burned, and A Large Amount of Feed Stuff Consumed.

The Livery stable of Barnett & Stone caught fire Sunday night about nine o'clock and the roof of the building was partially consumed. The fire originated in one of the stalls in which a horse was tied. The animal was badly burned about the head, both eyes were burned out and it was necessary to kill it. About $50.00 worth of hay and other feed stuff was burned up and the total loss will amount to $350.00. The origin of the fire is a mystery. Mr. Stone thinks it was done by some one dropping a match in some hay in the horse trough, as there was no fire in the building and had been none during the day. The loss was not covered by insurance.

Killed His Brother

Paducah, Ky., Dec. 16.—Returning from hunting and finding his twelve-year-old brother Jewel in the dining room, Sam Stahl, fourteen-years old, of Arlington, levelled his gun and fired. "Give him leave," the boy granted it and Sam Stahl pulled the trigger and blew Jewel's head off. "He didn't know it was loaded."

SNEEZE STUFF CAUSES TROUBLE.

Al Hanson was Thrown in a Room Where Party was in Progress.

Prof. J. A. Caldwell and Jas. Webb two prominent citizens of Hanson were tried in the county Court at Madisonville Saturday on a charge of the breach of peace.

The trouble came about because pepper was thrown into the room at Hanson where a party was in progress and started everybody to sneezing. Webb rounded across the hall from the party and he was suspected so the merry-makers decided to give him a dose of his own medicine and filled his room in the hotel full of the stuff.

Webb came in not a whiff of the nose tickler, and seized a pitcher of water. He went to the door of the room in which the party was being held and shouted that the first person, that came out of room would be drowned. Not to be daunted the homeward-bound festive makers opened the door and Webb true to his word emptied the contents of his pitcher on several young ladies. Prof. Caldwell resented this and seized a pitcher himself, emptied the contents on Webb and a fight ensued in which the teacher struck Webb a blow over the head with a pitcher, making a bad gash.

Parties intervened. Warrants for arrest were duly sworn out and the trial occurred this morning.

All the boys and girls at the party were on the witness stand and the outcome of the trial brought many from Hanson.

At 3 p. m. the jury was discharged. It is understood that three stood for firing both of the parties and three for firing only Webb. The date for the new trial has not been set.

It is reported there will be another Mine opened near Marmington in the near future, parties have been busy several days taking up opinions on mineral rights in that vicinity.

The five boys who were tried at Hanson Friday on a charge of disturbing public worship were discharged. The cases were before Magistrate Webb. Brown, Jr.

The Vision of the Tree

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

The tree was all a-twinkle with its candles here and there
And with a merry tinkle swayed the gifts it had to bear,
And all was now completed for the morrow that should be
With joyous welcome greeted by the children 'round the tree.

When—I may have dreamed it so.
But the grace of long ago
Came through the bush of midnight and bided there with me.

I sighed as does a sleeper when dreams hold the heart of him
The shadows grew the deeper till the tree was blue and dim—
Then marvelously glowing as of all the stars and suns
With a beauty past all knowing, with the majesty that stuns,
Stood a cross of jewel-flame
Which from out the shadows came—
And softly came a chanting: "To these, the little ones!"

Strange glory held the trifles that hung upon the tree;

The marveling that stifled all speech laid hold on me;

I felt the impulse olden that led the storied kings

To come with treasures golden and precious offerings

Is that first gray Christmas dawn

Of the centuries ago.

When all earth throbb'd with music and beat of angel wings.

I knew that I was dreaming—but there rose a glorious chime

And the morning stars were gleaming in the field of space and time;

Then the heart-enrapturing vision slowly vanished quite away.

But upon a night I knew it had been for me to stray—

And I heard it faintly far

Music dripping from each star—

The voice of Children singing—and it was Christmas Day!

G. W. SHERRILL MAKES BOND

Former Cashier of the Robards Bank Will Answer Charge of False Swearing in Circuit Court.

FRIENDS CLAIM CAN EASILY CLEAR HIMSELF.

C. W. Sherrill formerly cashier of the defunct Robards bank executed bond in the sum of $500, for his appearance in the Circuit court of the January term to answer to the charge of false swearing to a bank statement. The bond was signed by his father C. L. Sherrill.

Cashier Sherrill went to Henderson on the noon train Friday from Earlington voluntarily, Roy Lican deputy sheriff of Henderson county got on the same train at Robards and read the warrant to Sherrill.

On arrival at Henderson Sherrill accompanied by his father, and E. L. Brooks his father-in-law and several other friends appeared before county Judge Young and executed bond.

President Taft Will Address Southern Commercial Congress, at Atlanta.

Washington, Dec. 19.—President Taft will address the greatest gathering of business men ever held in this country on March 10, at Atlanta Georgia, where the Southern Commercial Congress will be in session for three days beginning March 10, 1917. The Governors of the other fifteen Southern States united with Governor Brown, of Georgia in extending this invitation to President Taft, which was delivered to him to-day through the Executive Committee of the Southern Commercial Congress and a Committee from Georgia.

The program of the three days will be the most important in the history of the Commercial South, as invitations will be issued to the most prominent men of the nation to participate. In addition to the address by the president, who has chosen for his subject, "A Greater Nation through a Greater South," addresses will be made by Ex-President Roosevelt, Gov. elect Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey, Hon. T. V. Powderly, Surgeon General, Walter Wymann, the Governors of the Southern States, and other distinguished men throughout the entire country.

This vast rally is intended to typify in a vivid manner to the people of the nation that the South, regarding itself as an integral portion of our great country, has set itself to the task of building a still greater nation through the growth and development of a still greater South.

Final arrangements of the program are now being completed by the Executive Committee of the Southern Commercial Congress at Washington, who expect to announce the full list of speakers within a few days.

Girls Must Not Be Whipped in Lexington Public Schools.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 17.—At the meeting of the Lexington School Board tonight, the board, with only one dissenting vote, adopted a rule proposed by Judge S. M. Wilson, which abolishes the whipping of girls in the public schools and pupils of either sex in the high school. The rule prescribes that no pupil in the high school nor girl in any of the public schools of the city shall receive corporal punishment and that a boy must be whipped in the presence of the class before which the offense was committed; if not in the presence of the class, it must be done in the principal's office in the presence of two lady teachers, or one teacher and a parent of the child.

A parent may, upon request, approved by the superintendent of schools, inflict the punishment in the presence of the principal and a teacher. If a pupil's parents forbid corporal punishment being inflicted upon the child, the latter may be suspended or expelled.

Trouble Narrowly Averted in Night Ride Trial at Eddyville.

Eddyville, Ky., Dec. 17.—Trouble in the night ride trial in which Roy Merrick, Spunk Creekmar, Vilas Mitchell and Frank Murphy are charged with the murder of Axiom Cooper at Lanesco last July was narrowly averted today when Wallace Merrick, a brother of Mrs. Lovie Roberts and Mrs. Lee Curtis, state witnesses took offense at the question asked them by John W. Kelly, counsel for the defendants.

Merrick took the question as an insult and demanded an apology from Kelly. Kelly refused and a quarrel followed, in which Merrick is said to have threatened Kelly with a revolver. By order of the court, the two were separated.

State soldiers on duty here during the trial have been instructed to prevent further trouble.

The prosecution completed their case today and in the afternoon the defense introduced witnesses in an effort to prove an alibi for the accused man.

ADTALK

What would you think of a salesman who reported to duty one day, lay off for two, worked a half day, went off for a week and so on without any regularity? Surely you would not expect good service from such a man. And yet some merchants hold advertising, which is simply a "salesman," up to great results when it is allowed to "work" very irregularly. The fact that advertising costs money is proof of its value. Things without cost are usually worth only their price.

The Substitute Mistletoe

by Wilbur D Nesbit

There is anything in the world more aggravating to a young woman than a young man who will not, or cannot, see that she favors him above all the rest, it has not yet been listed.

Prudence Milton as much as a year ago discovered that Alfred Ruthven possessed all the qualities that go to make a man noble and splendid and brave—no, not brave! A brave man would have proposed to Prudence long since. But Alfred, Prudence knew, was handsome and intelligent and prosperous. Just one thing he lacked—self-confidence. Alfred was bashful on the love subject.

A great many men are so. They can discuss politics, the musical glasses, the drama, literature, art, science and the classics fluently with a young woman, but they shy away from the real heart interest like an aeroplane dodging a church steeple.

Why, Prudence had inviolated Alfred into long walks with her in the silvery moonlight of spring and the golden moonlight of summer—all to no avail. Once, in August, she was boasting with him, and she had pretended to be afraid the heart would capsize.

"What would you do if it did?" she asked him.

Naturally she expected him to reply that he would plunge in after her and save her or perish in the attempt. Such a heroic remark as that would of course lead into a more passionate avowal of his reasons for being willing to lay down his young life for her—and then, of course, he could easily hopscotch right along to a request that since he was willing to die for her, she might consider favorably a proposition to share his life with him, or words to that effect.

But when she asked him, with a tremulous shake in her lovely voice, and with a world of faith and trust in her lustrous eyes:

"What would you do if the boat capsized?"

He never even stopped rowing. He just said:

"It wouldn't matter much. The water isn't over three feet deep here."

Prudence almost capsized the boat from sheer vexation then. When a woman becomes vexed with a man because he does not realize that he loves her out a little white sand and snowed him a blister thereon—not a big blister, just a sort of a beauty spot of a blister—would have taken that hand in his and all but wept over it. He would have asked her to give that hand to him and to come along with it herself, and would have sworn by high heaven and the marching stars and the sun and moon and sky that never again should that wonderful hand know the wearying stress of toil! What did Alfred do?

He looked at the blister appraisingly—without taking those taper fingers in his—and he said:

"Stick a needle under it from one side and let the water out, then put a little peroxide on it tomorrow."

Shades of Romeo! Memories of Dante and Beatrice! Was it any wonder that Prudence brought her pretty lips together in a straight line and registered a mental vow that Alfred should rue this speech some day? Let us now pass lightly on again.

Come we now to Christmas eve. Prudence by way of means familiar to the feminine mind, conveyed to the bashful Alfred the intelligence that she had made for him a Christmas remembrance. Never mind how she did this. You, if you are a man grown, will be able to hark back into your own past and bring up some instances of woman's diplomacy wherein she was able to tell you something without saying anything in particular. Just gave your intuition a chance.

Knowing this, Alfred knew that it was his bounden duty to reciprocate—and to reciprocate in advance. Always, always, a man must reciprocate in advance to a lady.

So Alfred might have been seen stepping hesitatingly up the steps of the Milton home on Christmas eve.

He carried a small package in one hand. It was his intention to deliver this to whoever came to the door, with a message that it was for Prudence.

To answer to his ring no less a person than Prudence herself opened the door. Her eyes were sparkling, her cheeks were rosy, and in one hand she held a bunch of green stuff.

"Why, Alfred!" she exclaimed.

"Come right in. I'm putting up the Christmas greens."

So Alfred came right in, shyly and shyly depositing the little package on a small table in the hall as he entered. Prudence led the way to the living room, which was empty of other people, fortunately, at that moment.

"Won't you help me?" she asked.

"That is, she allowed him to put the Kiss Back Where He Got It."

"I think it is such fun to decorate the house with the holly and stuff for the holidays. Now I've just been trying to tie this bunch to the chandelier."

She mounted a chair and affixed the bunch of green sprays to the chandelier. Alfred stood in dumb admiration. He looked at Prudence, and he looked at the green herbage which she fastened to the fixture. She looked down at him, smiling, then put out her hand and said:

"Help me down," she said.

Alfred caught her hand to assist her to come from the chair.

Heroes are made in a moment. No man knows in what instant his soul may flame within him so that he will do and dare as he never dreamed of doing or daring. The philosophers call such times psychological moments. This was one. Alfred helped Prudence down, and it was quite natural and easy for her to find herself in his arms when she reached the floor. And then before she knew what he was about—at least, so she said—he had kissed her.

"Mister Ruthven!" she exclaimed.

"How dare you?"

"I—I—you know—the—the mistletoe!" he stammered, disengaging one arm and pointing to the decoration above her head.

"I forgot that," she said, demurely. And then Alfred found tongue at last and told her what she had wanted him to tell her all the year. And he asked her to be his Christmas gift, and she consented in what is so often called the time-honored way. That is, she allowed him to put the kiss back where he got it.

Later that evening Alfred said to her:

"Do you know, I don't believe I ever would have had the courage to propose to you if it hadn't been for that mistletoe."

"That mistletoe!" she laughed. "Alfred, that mistletoe is snail. I don't believe it would have worked at all if it had been real mistletoe."

her, you may go out and stake all your worldly possessions that sooner or later she will bring that man to his knees, or her feet, as you like to put it.

Let us pass lightly over the glorious days of fall, when Prudence allowed Alfred to call several times and find her in the kitchen with an apron on helping her mother put up jellies and preserves and things. Let us even pass lightly over the evening when she showed him the blister upon her fair white hand made by a sputtering drop of apple butter. Yes, pass lightly over it. Humor and Philosophy BY DUNCAN H. SMITH ANOTHER PERIL

THE doctors are knocking on kissing. They call it a dangerous thing. Insisting in words quite amiable. That kiss of that sort has a sting. That one that way is another. The germs of disease may transmit. If it is so fruitful with disaster. We wonder if doctors have quit.

It may be the doctors have reason. For trying to banish the kiss. That's planned by some one impulsive. Right square on the tip of a kiss. But if they are really in earnest. In making this public attack. They have on their hands quite a contract. Before they can banish the smack.

It may be all wrong, this indolence. In thrilling exchanges of bliss. But who is to blame, Mister Doctor. Since nature invented the kiss? It may be the means of transmitting. A bunch of diseases; but, say. Who wouldn't be sick with the measles. If he could secure them that way?

We like to give heed to the doctor. And take to our heart his advice. But will he be able to see some figure. We'll have to put this chunk on ice. For, though we may solemnly promise. No longer the kiss to apply. Just where it appears to be needed. We'll get a few in on the fly.

Had Her Reason. When the sewing machine was much newer than it is today a blithe and brisk sewing machine agent drove up to a prosperous looking farmhouse and soon the lady of the house much interested.

"I would like to buy it," she said. "but you must first see my husband."

"Where is he?"
"Over by the stable."

The agent looked out and saw a colored man at work.

"What?" he said. "Are you married to a colored man?"

"Yes," she replied. "You will understand how that happened when I tell you that my first husband was a sewing machine agent."

Mean Thing! "Life is brief."
"Yes."
"And youth evanescent."
"Indeed!"
"Isn't you think so?"

"Seems to me you have been youthful for ever so long."

To Improve His Speed. "How fast can that horse go?"
"That depends."
"On how you feed him?"
"Not on whether you hitch him to a cart or load him in a box car."

I Haven't Time. "The office doesn't seek the man, as it used to."
"No; it doesn't seem to."
"I wonder why?"
"It is too busy dodging him."

Easy. "Did he make his mark?"
"No; he concluded he would do something else."
"What?"
"Be one."

Improved Method. First he was meek and humble. Avoiding strife and strife. And then he took a tumble. And kicked his way through life.

Preservative. "QUIT YER BLARNEY AND MAKE ME!"

"How do you manage to keep a cook?"
"Keep a cook?"
"Yes."
"Oh, we just salt her down with a big salary."

PERT PARAGRAPHS. It is easier to work than to play when the work is yours and the play is the other fellow's game.

It is a good thing to feel well disposed toward your neighbor, but sometimes his ingratitude habit of giving advice won't let you.

When you can't find any way to make headway just sit down and try to grow a fine crop of patience.

Perhaps one reason why your friends are so fond of you is because you seem such a good thing to them.

People who keep their friends to bat water are generally in a new themselves most of the time, so perhaps they deserve some sympathy.

He is diplomatic who appears to agree with the self made man's opinion of himself.

A large sized bank account has a wonderfully beautifying effect upon both the face and mind of any woman.

Some people seem perfectly happy when they have a fine side line of trouble to worry over.

Blue Stocking Club.

O. S. Smith, of the city, has been elected president of the Blue Stocking Club, which is a social organization for the ladies of the city. The club has been organized for some time, and has been very successful in its work. The club has been very successful in its work, and has been very successful in its work.

The roll called was reported to, by the members, the current events concerning England, Miss Ellen Gold, and an excellent Xmas story, this being followed by the "Maze in Review" by Miss Elizabeth Givens, which dealt with the Poets and Poems of the English Lake School.

Miss Allen Davis read a paper on "The English Holiday Customs" after which Mrs. R. L. Hall gave a splendid account of true life of D. Quincy and his styles of writing. The club then adjourned to a social session where a beautiful luncheon was served.

Mrs. Givens graciously assisted Miss Martin in serving.

The next event in the series of socials will be a program of music, drama and recitation, which will be given in the hall of the city, with a miniature lighted candle, placed on its topmost tier, each one supposing to make a wish for the benevolent Miss J. M. Jones, be fore her candle ceased to burn.

Just at this inopportune time a messenger boy delivered to Miss Givens a telegram which was forwarded to her by Santa Claus, in the letter the fact that he could not attend the club this afternoon on account of an unavoidable accident, happening to his property.

The social Xmas tree in the center of the table which was brilliantly lighted with tiny candles then had to be relieved of its mysterious looking boxes, handkerchiefs and rolls by Mrs. Givens who found that every gift was labeled Miss Katherine Jennings. Each containing sheer, dainty handkerchiefs as little tokens of love from the club girls.

This being the hostess original idea which was exceedingly clever and very enjoyable in all details.

Thursday Afternoon Literary Club.

Miss Carrie Atkinson charmingly entertained the Thursday Afternoon Literary Club on the evening of December 15th at her home in Earlington.

Miss Davis Hendricks gave an excellent account of the "Thirty Years Peace." After which Mrs. B. N. Gordon in an original style journeyed with the club to the "Wonders of our own Country," stopping at Niagara Falls, Yosemite Valley, Mammoth Cave, Yellow Stone Park and other places of note.

The story of Hester Prynne, one of Hawthorne's favorite characters in his Scarlet Letter, was beautifully sketched by Mrs. Fred Remcke, in her own inimitable style, at the conclusion of which the club adjourned to a social hour.

The home of Miss Atkinson was exquisitely decorated with holly, mistletoe and evergreen, in keeping with the Xmas idea which was thoroughly carried out throughout the entire evening.

The dainty luncheon was served in three courses, as favors were given tiny red Xmas baskets, the handles being tied with sprigs of holly, and filled with a mound.

At the conclusion of the luncheon the hostess unfolded the crepe paper drapery from the mantel shelf in the library, which had securely hidden from view a row of mysterious looking tiny red and green stockings, filled with all kinds of toys and candies, numbering fifteen in all. She distributed these saying, that she feared the members were so entirely grown up that Santa would think them too large to fill their stockings so she had filled one for each.

Miss Helen Gregory, of Yazoo, Miss., and Miss Florence Allyn, of Spokue, Wash., were the

LEE WILEY LOOSES SUIT

St. Bernard Mining Co. Wins Case in Webster Circuit Court.

The suit of Lee Wiley against the St. Bernard Mining Co., in the Webster Circuit court terminated in favor of the defendant upon preliminary instructions by the court, Judge Hanson presiding. It was alleged that plaintiff received an injury while working for the defendant in its Shamrock mines, and that the employing company was at fault and responsible.

W. N. Martin Has Exciting Time.

Walter N. Martin, foreman of the Bee office, had a warm time for a few minutes this morning. He was smoking his pipe, as usual, while coming to work and there was a strong North wind blowing. The wind blew fire out of the pipe on his coat and fanned it into a light blaze. When Mr. Martin discovered his coat was on fire he made several frantic efforts to put it out, such as rolling on the ground, grabbing the burning part with his hands, etc. He finally pulled the coat off and stood on it. That put the fire out.

How Old People May Prolong Their Lives

At advanced age the organs act more slowly than in youth. Circulation becomes poor, blood thin and watery, appetite fitful, and digestion weak. This condition leaves the system open to disease such as Coughs, Colds, Grippe, Pneumonia, Rheumatism, etc.

VINOL is the greatest health creator and body builder we know of for old people, as it supplies the very elements needed to rebuild wasting tissue and replace weakness with strength.

HERE IS THE PROOF
A case recorded in Albany, N. Y., of a woman who felt she was breaking down by age and was dormant to this week and feeble condition of old people. She had no strength and her highest exertion tired her, but VINOL made her well and strong, and she now feels she feels ten years younger than she did before taking VINOL.

We ask every aged person in this neighborhood to try a bottle of VINOL with the understanding that we will return their money if it does not prove beneficial.
